

ABSTRACT

The invention comprises a component bridge to reduce the amount of noise entering a passenger compartment of a vehicle through openings in a firewall through which conduits extend. In particular, the component bridge extends from a dashmat to a vehicle component casing to envelop the space around a conduit passing from the engine compartment through the firewall to the component casing.